3,000 Motormen and Conductors Man Cars After Two Weeks' Tieup.

TO CONTINUE THEIR FIGHT MUST DECIDE BY SATURDAY

Officers of Union Announce Negotiations - for 60-Cent an Hour Scale Will Be Resumed Within a Week or So; Strike Breakers Leave.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 29.—Street car service resumed here today for the first time in two weeks when 3,000 striking motormen and conductors of the Pittsburgh Street Railway company returned to work following a vote of strikers yesterday to abandon the strike. Men went back to work at the increase—five cents an hour—used them by the national war board recently, against which the strike two weeks ago last night.

The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway men will reopen negotiations for the full 60-cent an hour scale originally demanded by the Pittsburgh men within a week or so, however, William D. Fitzgerald, international vice president, informed the receivers of the company last night.

Eight hundred strike breakers were paid off and left the city last night, when it was assumed cars would be operated by the regular crews.

STRIKE OF UNION STEEL MEN THREATENED IN THE ANSWER TO JUDGE GARY

Deny Chairman's Claims and Declare He Is Forcing Issue; Sunday Time Limit.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—After a conference here yesterday with the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, representatives of the committee of the steel and iron workers' union made public a letter to E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel Corporation, announcing that the committee would be forced unless the corporation granted an interview to the committee within the time limit.

The letter was dated at New York, Wednesday, but was withheld until the steel workers' representatives could confer with Samuel Gompers, president, and other officials of the federation.

"We have received your answer to our request for a conference on behalf of the employees of your corporation," said the letter to Judge Gary, "and we understand the first paragraph of your answer to be an absolute refusal on the part of your corporation to concede to your employees the right of collective bargaining."

"You question the authority of our committee to represent the majority of your employees. The only way by which we can prove our authority is by the strike vote into effect and we sincerely hope you will not forget to do so."

"We asked for a conference for the purpose of arranging a meeting with the questions of wages, hours, conditions of employment and collective bargaining might be discussed. Your answer is a flat refusal for such conference."

"You also made reference to the attitude of your corporation in not opening or preventing your employees from joining labor organizations. It is a matter of common knowledge that the tactics employed by your corporation and subsidiaries have for years most effectively prevented any attempt at organization by your employees."

"Some few days are still at the disposal of our committee before the time limit will have expired when there will be no discretion left to the committee but to enforce the decree of your employees whom we have the honor to represent."

STEEL CONTROVERSY MAY BE TAKEN TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—President Wilson is to be asked to take a hand in the controversy between the steel workers and the United States Steel Corporation in an effort to prevent a general strike.

This announcement was made today by the committee of the steel workers who charge that the steel corporation was trying to force the issue before the President could have an opportunity to pass upon the merits of the controversy.

In a telegram to the union of steel workers at Gary, Ind., the committee said the workers were not to strike "under any circumstances" until the strike date had been set by the committee. Gary union had telegraphed that the steel workers were taking a "wholesale" for the purpose of forcing a strike.

AUTOMATIC BRAKE MAKES ONE-MAN CAR SAFE, IS THE CLAIM

West Penn Tries New Type Out on Baggaley Line Out of Control.

In an effort to meet objections to one-man street cars for short line runs the West Penn has put into service a car equipped with an automatic air brake device. This, it is claimed, will make operation of the car absolutely safe, even if the motorman is taken suddenly ill or his attention distracted by any unusual circumstance.

The first car so equipped was put in service on the Baggaley line out of control and is said to be proving a success.

In operating the car, either the controller must be held down by the pressure of the operator's hand, or his foot must remain against the foot control.

Immediately upon the release of the pressure for any reason, the airbrakes are applied, and the car is brought to a stop more quickly than was the case when the hand brakes were applied on the older type of car.

The principal objection offered in towns against the one-man car was that in case of anything happening to the motorman, the car would be left to run wild, there being no other operator on board.

The West Penn company has sought to meet this objection by the new installation of the automatic safety device.

The car was tried out before being put into service. It was speeded up to the maximum speed, and then the hand of the operator was released from the controller. Immediately the brakes were applied automatically, and the car came to a halt within the distance between two trolley poles.

The doors of the car, under the new arrangement, cannot be opened until the car is stopped, and the car cannot be started until the doors are closed. When the automatic brakes are applied the doors unlatch automatically so as to provide for a safe and easy exit of the passengers.

It is claimed that the new device makes the one-man car as safe as it is humanly possible to make any trolley car.

Safety is assured for passengers in getting on and off, since the doors do not open until the car stops and since the car cannot be started until the doors are closed, the pressure of the motorman's hand on the controller or to release the pressure from the foot control while the car is in motion is privileged to use while reading his hand, means the instant application of the automatic control.

RICE PAYS $22,000 FOR FOURTH INTEREST IN THE SMITH HOUSE

By Acquisition of Share of Rockwell Stillwagon He Becomes Sole Owner of Hostelry.

By a deal closed yesterday, Rockwell Stillwagon sold his one-fourth interest in the Smith House to William E. Rice for $22,000, according to an announcement made last night. Mr. Rice is now sole owner of the hotel, located in Crawford avenue.

Mr. Stillwagon, who has been in ill health for some time, will travel through the south in the hope of benefiting thereby, it was said this afternoon.

The sale of the Stillwagon interest would seem to indicate that the property has lost nothing in value through prohibition. Its value at this time, according to the price paid for the fourth interest, is nearly $90,000. A few years ago, when the estate of the late Berthanna R. Smith was being closed, and after the property of Mrs. Smith had escheated to the state, the property was sold for $70,000.

Disagreeing with his statement she then caused the following advertisement to be printed:

ORGY OF EXTRAVAGANCE ALL OVER THE COUNTRY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The people in many parts of the United States are virtually in league with the profiteers, according to William Mather Lewis, director of the savings division of the Treasury Department, who has just returned to Washington after visiting the various Federal Reserve districts.

"A veritable orgy of extravagant buying is going on," he said. "The reaction from the careful use of money during war time is widespread and disturbing. Retailers are accumulating goods from jobbers without arguing about prices. If they can only be assured of immediate delivery, they know their customers will scramble for the goods, regardless of cost. Thus, with an abnormal demand and a limited output, nothing else can be expected than high prices. It is a natural, though deplorable, consequence that profiteers abound."

SCOTSDALE G. A. R. BAND TO GIVE 100TH FREE CONCERT TONIGHT

Crack Musical Organization Will Achieve Unusual Distinction Tonight.

Not many municipal bands outside of those in the cities, who are paid for the playing they do, can boast of having given 100 free concerts, but such will be the distinction of the G. A. R. band of Scottdale after tonight's appearance at Loucks park.

The history of the G. A. R. band dates back 35 years and it numbered among its makeup, past and present, men from different walks of life, to all of whom there come vivid recollections of moments pleasantly spent, and lessons, musical and otherwise, well learned.

The band's standard has been an interpretation of the better class of music, interspersed with such lighter numbers as may seem proper. To maintain such a standard requires a band of correct instrumentation, and this all concerned are constantly striving for.

"The moral support given by the public by their presence at concerts has given the band encouragement to continue its work," declared Director J. F. Hardy. "And we gratefully thank the public for making it possible for us to give our 100th concert. The band extends an invitation to all to lend a hand in a financial way, too, so Scottdale can always boast of having a good band."

Joseph Skergan, a well known young tenor, will be soloist tonight, assisted by a quartette. Joseph Hill, cornet soloist, of Pittsburgh and an old friend of the band, will play if he can arrange to be present. The program follows:

March, "York Pioneers"..... Florence Goussier, "Lagarto"..... Kiefer Held Selection, "Dedication and Benediction of the Poignards Les....."..... Mr. Joseph Skergan Selection, "The Girl Behind the Gun"..... Caryl Vocal quartette, assisted by soloists. Joseph Skergan, tenor; Thomas McLaughlin, second tenor; C. E. Carles, baritone; S. P. Stevens, bass. Reminiscence of Scottdale..... Godfrey Latest popular extras will be used.

This was true in the strongly Democratic wards as well as in those normally Republican. Seven hundred ninety-seven persons had been registered when the closing hour, 10 o'clock, arrived last night. Many Have to Move on September 1 But Have No Place to Move to.

INSURANCE AGENTS GET TRIP

Herman Bendiner of Philadelphia Visits Brother William White on Way to Del Monte, California; George C. Jarrett a Winner, Too.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, Aug. 23.—With the first of September close at hand and much moving to be done, houses cannot be found in Scottdale. This has made the sale of real estate in Scottdale greater during the past week than it has all during the summer months. Sales totaling $7,500 were made by E. F. DeWitt alone. These include the Thomas Rutherford property on South Chestnut street, sold to David Buckley, the John Ferguson property on Third avenue, to Herman Kreeger, and the G. F. Turner double house, to W. B. Nicholson.

Eight-room modern house corner lot 60x110 feet, Locks avenue; for $4,700.

Seven-room house, one acre land, on Reagan town road; for $1,500.

Eight-room double house, Everson, rents for $20.00; for $1,800.

Seven-room modern house, shower electric lights, everything in No. 1 condition; for $3,400.

Nine-room house, 2 1/2 acres land, on street car line and brick road; for $3,000.

Six-room house, hot water heater and bath; for $2,500.

Eight-room house, and vacant lot adjoining, on paved street; for $2,300.

Four acres land, five-room house, best water, one mile from Scottdale on street car line and brick road; for $2,700.

Five-room brick house, near Valley; for $1,600. E. F. DeWitt—Adv-23-35.

Entertainers for Comrades.

Clarence W. Boyer entertained in honor of several boy friends who recently returned from overseas at his Homestead avenue home on Wednesday evening. An elaborate lunch was served.

Agents Get Trip.

Herman Bendiner of Philadelphia, one of the New York Life Insurance agents, who is in the $200,000 class won a trip to Del Monte, California, stopped off here yesterday with his brother, William Bendiner.

George C. Jarrett of Scottdale is also a member of the $200,000 New York Life Insurance class and will be a guest on this trip.

Champion Boy Home.

Harry Hosteller of Champion, who recently returned from overseas, is visiting his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Sturtz. He was across more than two years, seeing service in France and Germany. His company after taking part in several big drives was under orders to advance at 12 o'clock when the armistice was signed at 11 o'clock, November 11. While he had several very narrow escapes, he came home without a scratch.

Why Wait?

Why should you wait to buy Fall garments next month that will cost you $10 to $15 more than if you bought it now. To keep busy during this month we are willing to share with you our savings on early purchases and even sacrifice part of our regular small profits and fully save you $15 on new snappy fall coats, suits, dresses and hats. We have your little girl's school needs ready at less than you can buy it for elsewhere. Bendiner's Broadway Ladies' Store. Adv.

Danger Lurks In Summer Foods For Babies

EVERY mother knows the evil effects of summer heat on a cow's milk. This danger is equally great to all foods unless carefully kept in a cool place away from insects.

Bad food loses its nourishing value. It causes constipation and diarrhea. These are at best always prevalent in the summer time. They depress the mind and weaken the body, and may cause more serious illness.

The first precaution is to see that the stools are regular and normal. In the case of babies and children, if less than twice a day you may suspect constipation; if more than three times a day, diarrhea. A remedy is then needed that will regulate and tone the bowels, and you will find none safer and better than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that millions of mothers constantly have in the house for just such purposes.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. A free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

MOTHER OF 8 GETS QUICK AID

Household duties, together with the care of eight children, was a little more than Mrs. P. Linderman, 225 W. Sunbury St., Shamokin, could stand, she says.

"My nerves became unruly, I couldn't sleep at night and finally my appetite went back on me. Catarrh, which I had suffered with for years, added to my misery, until one day I decided to try Tanlac."

"Now all is different. Tanlac got my stomach working right, my nerves are as strong as iron; I have a ravenous appetite and catarrh is a thing of the past. Thanks to Tanlac."

Tanlac, which builds up the system, creates a healthy appetite, promotes digestion, vitalizes the blood and brings back color to the cheeks and the sparkle of health to the eyes, is sold here by Belkley's Pharmacy, Connelville Drug Co. and Fred Harmoning.—Adv.

Two of Them Cited for Bravery; Lieutenant Shallenberger Gives His Life.

About 150 members of the Galley family attended the reunion at the Dawson fair grounds on Thursday. Fifty of these attended the first gathering of the clan 23 years ago and 10 of them had attended all of the yearly reunions. P. G. Smith of Dickerson Run, aged 81 years, five months and six days, was the oldest member present.

The present officers were all re-elected and given power to select the place and decide on the date for the coming year. A resolution was passed unanimously thanking H. T. Cochran and Harry Cochran for the use of the driving park for the reunion.

The records showed that 10 men in the family connection served their country during the war. They were Lieutenant H. D. Shallenberger, Jr., Vanderbilt, Enlisted August, 1917. RAILROAD MAN GIVES GOOD ADVICE

"Several years ago I was under treatment of a stomach specialist for five months, three weeks of which were spent in a hospital. Another stomach specialist told me I had gall stones and that an operation was necessary. I did not want to have this I lost 45 pounds in weight. Talking with a brakenman one day he told me of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and since taking it I have gained 16 pounds and am feeling fine. I am advising others to try it. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. The return of Eddie, the fair-haired boy, to the ring has more than a local significance and will be watched by sport writers and fight fans far and near.

The Devil's Own

A Romance of the Black Hawk War

By Randall Parrish

Author of "Contraband," "Shea of the Irish Brigade," "When Wilderness was King," etc.

Illustrated by Edwin Meyer

"Certainly, hadn't I told you about them? Both girls are accepted as his daughters; but, if all I have heard is true, one must be his granddaughter. He paused reflectively, his eyes on the river. 'Haines told me a number of strange things about that family I had never heard before,' he admitted at last. 'You see he has known them for years, and attended to most of Beaucare's legal business. This is about how the story runs, as he told it. It wasn't generally known, but it seems that Lucius Beaucare has been married twice—the first time to a Creole girl in New Orleans when he was scarcely more than a boy. Nobody now living probably knows whatever became of her, but likely she died early; anyway she never came north, or has since been heard from. The important part is that she gave birth to a son, who remained in New Orleans, probably in her care, until he was fourteen or fifteen years old. Then some occurrence, possibly his mother's death, caused the judge to send for the lad, whose name was Adelbert, and had him brought to Missouri. All this happened before Haines settled at the Landing, and previous to Beaucare's second marriage to Mademoiselle Menard. Bert, as the boy was called, grew up wild, and father and son quarreled so continuously that finally, and before he was twenty, the latter ran away, and has never been heard of since—simply disappeared, and no one knows to this day whether he is alive or dead. At least if Judge Beaucare ever received any word from him he never confessed as much to Haines. However, the boy left behind tangible evidence of his existence."

"You mean—"

"In the form of a child, born to a quadroon girl named Della. The mother, it seems, was able in some way to convince the judge of the child's parentage. All this happened shortly before Beaucare's second marriage, and previous to the time when Haines came to the Landing. Exactly what occurred is not clear, or what explanation was made to the bride. The affair must have cut Beaucare's pride deeply, but he had to face the conditions. It ended in his making the girl Della his housekeeper, while her child—the offspring of Adelbert Beaucare—was brought up as a daughter. A year or so later the second wife gave birth to a female child, and those two girls have grown up together exactly as though they were sisters. Haines insists that neither of them knows to this day otherwise."

"But that would be simply impossible," I insisted. "The mother would never permit."

"The mother? Which mother? The slave mother could gain nothing by confession, and the judge's wife died when her baby was less than two years old. Della practically mothered the both of them, and is still in complete charge of the house."

"You mother?"

"She was pointed out to me—a gray-haired, dimpled woman, so nearly white as scarcely to be suspected of negro blood."

"Yet still a slave?"

"I cannot answer that. Haines himself did not know. If transmission papers had ever been executed it was done early, before he took charge of Beaucare's legal affairs. The matter never came to his attention."

"But, captain," I exclaimed, "do you realize what this might mean? If Judge Beaucare has not issued papers of freedom this woman Della is still a slave."

"Certainly."

"And under the law her child was born into slavery?"

"No doubt of that."

"But the unspeakable horror of it—this young woman brought up as free, educated and refined, so idly to discover herself to be a negro under the law, and a slave. Why, suppose Beaucare should die, or lose his property suddenly; she could be sold to the cotton fields, into bondage to anyone who would pay the price for her."

"There is nothing on record," Haines asserted himself as to that some years ago."

"What are the two girls named?"

"Rene and Eloise."

"Which one is the daughter?"

"Really, lieutenant, I do not know. You see I was never introduced, but merely gained a glimpse of them in the garden. I don't if I would recognize the one from the other now. You see all this story was told me later."

I sat there a long while, after he had gone below, the taciturn mate at the wheel. Totally unknown to me as these two mysterious girls were, their strange story fascinated my imagination. What possible tragedy lay before them in the years? What horrible revelation to wrench them asunder—to change in a single instant the quiet current of their lives? In spite of every effort, every lurking hope, some way I could not rid myself of the thought that Beaucare—either through sheer neglect, or some instinct of bitter hatred—had failed to meet the requirements of his duty. Even as I sat there, struggling valiantly against this suspicion, the judge himself came forth upon the lower deck and began pacing back and forth restlessly beside the rail. It was a struggle for me not to join him; the impetuosity of youth urging me even to brave his anger in my eagerness to ascertain the whole truth. Yet I possessed sense enough, or discretion, to refrain, realizing dimly that, not even in the remotest degree, had I any excuse for such action. This was no affair of mine. Nor, indeed, would I have found much opportunity for private conversation, for only a moment or two later Kirby joined him, and the two remained together, talking earnestly, until the gong called us all to supper.

the coarse food served in pewter dishes, I was struck by the drawn, ghastly look in Beaucare's face. He had aged perceptibly in the last few hours, and during the meal scarcely exchanged a word with anyone, eating silently, his eyes downcast. Kirby, however, was the life of the company, and the miners roared at his humorous stories and anecdotes of adventure—while outside it grew dark, and the little warrior struggled cautiously through the waters, seeking the channel in the wators.

CHAPTER III.

The End of the Game.

It must have been nearly midnight before I finally decided to seek a few hours' rest below, descending the short ladder and walking forward along the open deck for one last glance ahead. Some time the next day we were to be in St. Louis, and this expectation served to brighten my thoughts. I turned back along the deserted deck, only pausing a moment to glance carelessly in through the front windows of the main cabin. The forward portion was wrapped in darkness, and unoccupied, but beyond, toward the rear of the long saloon, a considerable group of men were gathered closely about a small table, above which a swinging lamp burned brightly, the rays of light illuminating the various faces. Gambling was no novelty on the great river in those days, gambling for high stakes, and surely no ordinary game, involving a small sum, would ever arouse the depth of interest displayed by these men. Some instinct told me that the chief players would be Kirby and Beaucare, and with quickening pulse I opened the cabin door and entered.

No one noted my approach, or so much as glanced up, the attention of the crowd riveted upon the players. There were four holding cards—the judge, Kirby, Carver, and McAfee; but I judged at a glance that the latter two were merely in the game as a pretense, the betting having already gone far beyond the limit of their resources. Without a thought as to the cards they held my eyes sought the faces of the two chief players, and then visioned the stakes displayed on the table before them. McAfee and Carver were clearly enough out of it, their cards still gripped in their fingers, as they leaned breathlessly forward to observe more closely the play. The judge sat upright, his attitude strained, staring down at his hand, his face white and eyes burning feverishly. That he had been drinking heavily was evident, but Kirby frowned him in apparent cold indifference, his feelings completely masked, with the cards he held bunched in his hands and entirely concealed from view. Between the two rested a stack of gold coin, a roll of crushed bills, and a legal paper of some kind, the exact nature of which I could not determine. It was evident that a fortune already rested on that table, awaiting the flip of a card. The silence, the breathless attention, convinced me that the crisis had been reached—it was the judge's move; he must cover the last bet or throw down his hand a loser.

Perspiration beaded his forehead, and he crunched the cards savagely in his hands. His glance swept past the crowd as though he saw nothing of their faces.

"Another drink, Sam," he called, the voice trembling. He tossed down the glass of liquor as though it were so much water, but made no other effort to speak. You could hear the strained breathing of the men.

"Well," said Kirby sneeringly, his cold gaze surveying his motionless opponent. "You seem to be taking your time. Do you cover my bet?"

Someone laughed nervously, and a voice sang out over my shoulder, "You might as well go the whole hog, judge. The niggers won't be no good without the land ter'ry 'em on. Flung 'em into the pot—they're as good as money."

Beaucare looked up, red-eyed, into the impassive countenance opposite. His lips twitched yet managed to make words issue between them.

"How about that, Kirby?" he asked hoarsely. "Will you accept a bill of sale?"

Kirby grinned, shuffling his hand carelessly.

"Why not? 'Twon't be the first time I've played for niggers. They are worth so much gold down the river. What have you got?"

"I can't tell offhand," stultifiedly.

"About twenty field hands,"

"And house servants?"

"Three or four."

The gambler's lips set more tightly, a dull gleam creeping into his eyes. "See here, Beaucare," he hissed sharply. "This is my game, and I play square and never squeal. I know about what you've got, for I've looked them over; thought we might get down to this sometime. I can make a pretty fair guess as to what your niggers are worth. That's why I just raised you ten thousand and put up the money. Now if you think this is bluff, call me."

"What do you mean?"

"That I will accept your niggers as covering my bet."

"The field hands?"

Kirby smiled broadly.

"The whole bunch—field hands and house servants. Most of them are old; I doubt if altogether they will bring that amount, but I'll take the risk. Throw in a blanket bill of sale, and we'll turn up our cards. If you won't do that the pile is mine as it stands."

Beaucare again wet his lips, staring at the uncovered cards in his hands. He could not lose; with what he held no combination was possible which would beat him. Yet in spite of this knowledge the cold, sneering confidence of Kirby brought with it a strange fear. The man was a professional gambler. What gave him such recklessness? Why should he be so eager to risk such a sum on an inferior hand? McAfee, sitting next him, leaned over, managed to gain a swift glimpse at what he held, and eagerly whispered to him a word of encouragement. The judge straightened up in his chair, grasped a filled glass someone had placed at his elbow, and gulped down the contents. The whispered words, coupled with the fiery liquor, gave him fresh courage.

"By heaven, Kirby, I'll do it!" he burst out. "You can't bluff me on the hand I've got. Give me a sheet of paper, somebody—yes, that will do."

He scribbled a half-dozen lines, faintly digging the pen into the sheet in his feverish eagerness, and then signed the document, flinging the paper across toward Kirby.

"There, you bloodsucker," he cried insolently.

"Is that all right? Will that do?"

The imperturbable gambler read it over slowly, carefully deciphering each word, his thin lips tightly compressed.

"You might add the words, 'This includes every chattel slave legally belonging to me,'" he said grimly.

"That is practically what I did say."

"Then you can certainly have no objection to putting it in the exact words I choose," calmly. "I intend to have what is coming to me if I win, and I know the law."

Beaucare angrily wrote in the required extra line.

"Now what?" he asked.

"Let McAfee there sign it as a witness, and then toss it over into the pile."

He smiled, showing a line of white teeth beneath his mustache.

"Nice little pot, gentlemen—the judge must hold some cards to take a chance like that," the words uttered with a sneer. "Fours, at least, or maybe he has had the luck to pick a straight flush."

Beaucare's face reddened, and his eyes browed hard.

"That's my business," he said tersely. "Sign it, McAfee, and I'll call this crowing cockerel. You young fool, I played poker before you were born. There now, Kirby, I've covered your bet."

"Perhaps you would prefer to raise it?"

"You hell-bound—no! That is my limit, and you know it. Don't crawl now, or do any more bluffing. Show your hand—I've called you."

Kirby sat absolutely motionless, his cards lying face down upon the table, the white fingers of one hand resting lightly upon them, the other arm concealed. He never once removed his gaze from Beaucare's face, and his expression did not change, except for the almost insulting sneer on his lips. The silence was profound, the deeply interested men leaning forward, even holding their breath in intense eagerness. Each realized that a fortune lay on the table; knew that the old judge had staked his all on the value of those five unseen cards gripped in his fingers. Again, as though to bolster up his shaken courage, he stared at the face of each, then lifted his bloodshot eyes to the impassive face opposite.

"Beaucare drew two knays," whispered an excited voice near me.

"Hell! So did Kirby," replied another. "They're both of 'em old hands."

The sharp exhaust of a distant steam pipe below punctuated the silence, and several glanced about apprehensively. As this noise ceased Beaucare lost all control over his nerves.

"Come on, play your hand," he demanded, "or I'll throw my cards in your face."

A "General Settlement."

In the rich soil that the Hapsburgs accumulated over many centuries, much of which is coming back to the nations that owned it, there is hardly a more interesting item than the coronation robes that Italy now proposes to have returned to Palermo, Sicily. Henry VI, emperor of the Holy Roman empire in the twelfth century, subdued the Sicilians and took back to Germany the gorgeous costume that Saracenic artisans had made for Norman kings who had come into control a hundred years earlier. Since then the robes have been worn by Hapsburg monarchs at their coronations, and of late years they have been kept, between these ceremonial occasions, in the imperial treasury in Habsburg, Vienna.

The robes include a magnificent mantle, a wonderfully embroidered alb or long gown of fine linen, and a grille of gold scales. As between Austria and Italy, it certainly looks like what Weelins Sport would have called a "general settlement."

Science Can Overcome Locusts.

Fruit trees are always the special objectives of the locusts when they sound the rallying cry, and when thorough preparations are not made against their coming they can leave a trail of ruin in the wake of their flight; but the science of the day is almost a match for the pest, and no such havoc can attend his attack as he achieved in the earliest days of his destructive history.

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just worn out with pains which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. H. DOOLEY, 1135 25th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Dooley's experience, and instead of dragging along from day to day with life a burden, give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has overcome just such conditions for thousands of others, and why not for you? For special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience is at your service.

The sharp exhaust of a distant steam pipe below punctuated the silence, and several glanced about apprehensively. As this noise ceased Beaucare lost all control over his nerves.

"Come on, play your hand," he demanded, "or I'll throw my cards in your face."

A "General Settlement."

In the rich soil that the Hapsburgs accumulated over many centuries, much of which is coming back to the nations that owned it, there is hardly a more interesting item than the coronation robes that Italy now proposes to have returned to Palermo, Sicily.

Henry VI, emperor of the Holy Roman empire in the twelfth century, subdued the Sicilians and took back to Germany the gorgeous costume that Saracenic artisans had made for Norman kings who had come into control a hundred years earlier.

Since then the robes have been worn by Hapsburg monarchs at their coronations, and of late years they have been kept, between these ceremonial occasions, in the imperial treasury in Habsburg, Vienna.

The robes include a magnificent mantle, a wonderfully embroidered alb or long gown of fine linen, and a grille of gold scales. As between Austria and Italy, it certainly looks like what Weelins Sport would have called a "general settlement."

WORTHLESSNESS OF PITCHERS' RECORDS

Peculiar Instance Recited of Game at Cincinnati.

Adolpho Luque, Cuban Twirler, Given Credit for Winning Contest Although Not in Lineup When Winning Run Scored.

The worthlessness of "won and lost" records for pitchers is shown in the following instance as recited by Jack Ryder in Cincinnati Enquirer:

Adolpho Luque the Cuban right-hander, received credit for winning the opening game of the season at Cincinnati from the Cardinals. He pitched only one inning, and was not actually in the lineup when the winning runs were scored but his credit for a victory in the records was in accordance with the rules governing the crediting of games to pitchers.

Luque went into the game at the start of the eighth inning, with the score 2 to 1 in favor of the Cardinals. The state of the score at that time eliminated Reuther who had pitched the first seven innings from any chance of receiving credit for the game if the Reds should win. Reuther left the contest with a loss on his hands, and if no more runs had been scored by the Reds he would have been charged with the defeat.

Luque pitched the first half of the eighth inning with success shutting out the enemy and retiring the side in order. In the last half of the inning the Reds staged a batting rally and eventually scored five runs giving them the lead, 6 to 2. In the course of this rally Luque was taken out of the game to let Walter Reub bat for him at a critical time, and it was a case on balls to Reub, batting for Luque which forced over the winning tally. By the time the inning was completed the Reds had the victory well in hand.

Red Eller went in and pitched the ninth inning retiring the opposing batters in one-two-three order. But Eller was not in the lineup when the Reds went to the front and by the time he went to the box the Reds had the game won with a lead of four runs. Therefore he could not receive credit for winning the game, which had been won before he was picked to go into the box. The credit therefore reverts to Luque, who was the pitcher in charge of the game when the winning round was staged.

A DELIGHTFUL FROCK

Cool, one can be seen in mid-summer when one puts on a frock of indestructible voile, low of neck line and wide of sleeves. Fine net makes the frock seem and not flaunts it. The navy blue and white stripes has a purple ribbon tied about it for contrast. The blue stripes on a soft tan ground make a pleasing color combination.

ALLEN ALL-AROUND ATHLETE

Player From Georgia Tech Making Good With Brooklyn—Probably Play in Outfield

Horace Allen the new player with the Supercats was fullback last year on the Georgia Tech Golden Tornado football team. He thinks he is a first baseman or catcher but his Uncle Wilbert Robinson is likely to make an outfielder of him. Allen has all the earmarks of an athlete. He stands about six feet, has big hands and can think quickly. Also he is willing to learn and has no foolish notions about being a ready-made star. He keeps set ear cocked all the time for tips from the older players. When he hears a caustic comment on a play from a veteran or Uncle Wilbert he jots it down as a point for future reference.

CULPRIT IS HARD TO RUN TO EARTH

COST OF LIVING AND LABOR QUESTION ARE PUZZLE TO OUR GOVERNMENT.

WORKERS TIRED OF STRIKES

They Ask That Purchasing Power of the Dollar Be Restored and That Necessity of Further Wage Increases Be Averted.

By EDWARD E. CLARK.

Washington.—As leading members of both parties in congress view the matter, the high cost of living and the labor question are to be two of the most prominent issues in the coming presidential campaign. The two questions in a way are interlocked and there has been evidence of this fact in Washington for some time, before the recent conferences that marked the beginning of real activity by the administration to restore the purchasing value of the dollar.

Congress has been investigating through a committee, and still is investigating, the high cost of living in the District of Columbia. The law makers have legislative control over the district and here they have full power to go at things and to pass remedial legislation without running afoul of constitutional or other questions. Of course the subject is one which covers the entire territory of the United States, but perhaps condensing one place are the result of which in other places. Congress, however, intends now to make a wide survey of the situation. The word "mutterings" frequently used to describe a condition which is before things happen. Washington hears that there are mutterings in the country. A few days ago a great conservative labor leader called on the president of the United States and told him that while his order had been granted increases in wages comparatively recently, it would be necessary to demand another increase unless the high cost of living came down.

This same thing is being told to congressmen by wage earners all over the United States. The problem which confronts the law makers is "How can the high cost of living be brought down, and the necessity for further increases in wages, which it is almost impossible for some employers to pay, be averted?"

All Shifting the Blame.

The instant that law makers start on an investigation of a subject of this kind the first answer to the main question always is "Supply and demand." Some of the law makers say that this no longer is an adequate answer, even though many men from time immemorial have declared that the answer is an axiom.

Men outside of congress who have looked into the subject, students of economics and others, have said that there is a unanimous disposition among the producers, the middle men, the wholesalers and the retailers to shift the blame. They report that the attempt to find the place where there is too much profit is the hardest task which they ever undertake. Both parties in congress have charged profiteering, but neither party seems to know just where the profiteering is under way, although in some cases there have been specific instances stated. So far as the District of Columbia is concerned, the direct charge has been made that landlords and some storekeepers have watched carefully for increases of pay among the government employees and instantly have advanced their prices so as to absorb the additional money which congress has voted to the workers. Of course if this could be proved it would be about as glaring a case of taking money from the "innocents" as could be adduced.

Justified, Say Landlords.

Landlords here say that under wartime legislation restricting the raising of rents they lost money and that they have got to advance the prices a reasonable amount in order to make a legitimate profit. What the landlords of the District of Columbia say is just about parallel to some of the answers made by other industries which have been accused of profiteering.

The counsel for one of the greatest organizations of labor in the United States told me the other day that laboring men everywhere tell him they are tired of striking, that they want adequate pay, of course, but that they do not want to have to strike constantly in order to get money enough to pay the landlord, the butcher, the baker and the milk man. The intimation of the counsel was that if the cost of living in some way could be regulated so that food men, clothing men, and landlords could get a fair profit and the salary and the wage earners could live and put aside a little money, there would be a sudden dropping off in strikes and a sudden disappearance of discontent.

This is all beautiful, and so the law makers say, but they would like it better if somebody would point a way to find out definitely just where the trouble is, and if it is possible, with things as they are in the world, to enable a $1 a day man to have what the French king once said his peasants all ought to have, "a fowl in the pot every Sunday," with meat and vegetables in proportion on the other days of the week and with food, clothing, a good house and schooling for his children.

His Fault.

Mrs. Penham—We became engaged under the mistletoe.

Benham—I know it, but I'm not blaming the blamed plant; it didn't grow over my head, and I got under it, knowing all its deadly properties.

Unkind.

"When everything is said and done" he began.

"I never expect to see that day," he interrupted.

"What day?"

"When you've said everything."

SCHEME DIDN'T WORK RIGHT

Business Man's Pleasant Evening Nothing at All Like What He Planned It Should Be.

"Gosh," exclaimed the business man, "I had the disappointment of my life last night. Even this sunny morning can't take away the sting. For the past month I don't believe I have had one nice, quiet, peaceful night at home—an evening of perfect relaxation. It seemed longer than that."

"Yesterday morning, with the thought that at the end of the day I would be free, my step to the office was more springy than usual. Not a business nor social engagement did I have. If anybody had attempted to start anything in either line I would have said, 'Nothing doing. I am going to be busy,' and I would have finished the sentence to myself with 'at home.'"

"I felt like a lark all day. 'Nothing to do tonight,' I kept repeating to myself, 'nothing at all; absolute freedom. I will catch up on the magazines that have been accumulating. I will take up the book that I haven't looked into for so long that I have forgotten who the characters are. I will sit in my favorite soft, easy, sun-drenched chair under the reading lamp. I will do my dressing gown and slippers. I will luxuriate all evening—nice, quiet, long evening.'"

"I could hardly wait for dinner to be over. When it was, I immediately set about doing all that I had planned. I relaxed, growing with comfort into my chair. My dog curled up at my feet, something he had not done for a month, too. I went to my reading. I read for an hour. And then, darn it all, I got so blamed sleepy that I couldn't hold my eyes open. I just had to go to bed. I hated to do it and I was thoroughly disgusted. But there was no help for it. And there you are; my glorious evening completely ruined because I was too sleepy to enjoy it."—Providence Journal.

WATCH CREATION OF FLORA

Botanists Intensely Interested in Nature's Work on Volcano Island in Bombon Lake, Luzon.

The destruction of vegetation in isolated regions is a matter of great interest to botanists, who are making increasing efforts to observe the creation of the new flora taking the place of the old. Volcano Island, in Bombon Lake, Luzon, was chiefly covered by grasses and small trees, before the eruption of the Taal volcano in 1911, but the eruption destroyed all plant life except some clumps of bamboo and a few bananas in the northern part of the island. In a report on the re-vegetation W. H. Brown, F. D. Merrill and H. S. Yates note that in six years 29 vascular plants had been recorded, the chief species being a few grasses. Of the total, 34 per cent were probably introduced by birds, about 20 per cent by the wind and about 10 per cent by the water—a different showing from that of the more exposed island of Krataue, in the Strait of Sunda, where the chief stock of birds was small. The growth of vegetation in Volcano Island is still sparse—a condition attributed to lack of proper soil and the ground's small amount of water and high proportion of sulphates.

Wideawake Mexicans.

A Mexican citizen of Mazatlan recently has been granted a concession of 100 hectares (about 247 acres), and so much more as may be necessary, at the railway station of Oso, state of Sinaloa, for the purpose of establishing an experimental farm to demonstrate the economic value which would result from the proper use of modern American agricultural machinery in the production of crops. It is the intention of the concessionaire to rent portions of the land at a nominal cost to American manufacturers of agricultural machinery and implements, who may send experts to demonstrate the machinery with the view both to promoting sales of the American goods and to educating the people in the more modern farming methods.

Victor Hugo for Japanese Readers.

The works of Victor Hugo have been translated into Japanese, to be published in a monthly series of 12 volumes beginning with June. "The translators," says the Herald of Asia, "include literary men of known standing, whose names are a guarantee of conscientious work. Many of the great French author's works have already been translated into Japanese, one of these, 'Les Miserables,' having been dramatized by the late Genichiro Fuchiji; but this is the first time a translation of Hugo's complete works has been attempted. The appearance of the new publications will confer a great boon upon the public, who evince a strong hunger for inspirations of the sort supplied by the illustrious French author."

No Jazz There.

A dance given at Albert Hall recently in London and patronized by all the nobility, including Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra, had upon its program fox-trots and other dances of the kind so popular before the war, but no "jazz." England is said to be dancing mad, but that the dancers do not take kindly to the latest American dance, although American dances are as a general thing very popular. The "Peacetime" is the newest English dance and is said to have been applauded for three minutes when the first notes of the waltz were played.

BANKING SERVICE

Modern Banking Service Explained. The banking service is far different today from what it was before the war. We now have the great task of reconstruction to handle. Vast sums of money, which were never considered earlier, are mentioned by bankers as though they were the merest trifle in banking. The Citizens National Bank of Connelville has a large part in the reconstruction work and considers every plan that its customers present. Banking in a large way, the kind of banking that is needed—Adv.
